COMMUNICATIONS

From the Editors

We welcome new Assistant Editors Kalliopi Efkleidou and Shannon LaFayette, and we welcome back Sarah Dieterle and Jeffrey L. Kramer. The staff of Nestor offer special thanks to Evi Gorogianni who continued to proof-read Greek entries during the past two years; we are keenly aware how much the accuracy of our listings would have suffered without her voluntary assistance. All errors, of course, remain our own.

Correction

Please note the following correction to a bibliographic entry in Nestor 30.6 (September 2003):

Wiener, Malcolm H., Spyros Iakovidis, Jeremy B. Rutter, Reinhard Jung, Andreas §030563

2003. "Report on the Final General Discussion." Pp. 245-260 in LH IIIC
Chronology and Synchronisms.

The last three authors were omitted from the original entry. The editors of Nestor apologize for the error.

Call for Papers

On 1 November 2003 abstracts are due for the 2004 Visiting Scholar Conference entitled We Are What We Eat: Archaeology, Food, and Identity, to be held on 12-13 March 2004 at Southern Illinois University at Carbondale. Archaeologists working in a wide range of time periods and areas with a variety of methodological and theoretical approaches, as well as scholars working in fields outside of but relevant to archaeology (including sociocultural anthropology, sociology, and history) are invited to submit abstracts (150-250 words) concentrating on the cultural roles and contexts of food, and discussing how tastes, taboos, food procurement strategies, modes of cooking and dining, and discard habits are intertwined with the construction and maintenance of individual and group identities, especially in relationship to the social significance of daily consumption practices. Potential topics may include, but need not be limited to:

Theoretical approaches to the study of food and foodways

Food and social status, ethnicity, prestige, gender, age, role, religion, class, etc.

The social and labor roles associated with various types of food production, preparation, and consumption

The limits placed by ecological and biological constraints on the expression of identity through food

The effect of archaeologists' own identities on interpretations of foodways (e.g.: to what extent is subjectivity an issue? If it does affect interpretations, how?)

How different facets of identity may be expressed at different stages of food production and use (for example: gender may be expressed in food procurement and preparation practices, but not in actual consumption habits)

The extent to which culturally specific food patterns may be generalized across societies

The extent to which archaeologists working in different areas and time periods can reasonably expect to explore identity through food practices (for example: can prehistorians address ethnicity? Can hunter-gatherer archaeologists discuss status?)

Further information is available from Dr. Katheryn Twiss at ktwiss@siu.edu or from the web-site at <http://www.siu.edu/~cai/VS.2004.htm>.
